Terrible idea

This would be a terrible place for a water-hungry, energy-hungry data center. Both costs are already too high for most citizens, and this would just drive them higher for nearly no gain to the local community. Maybe a small handful of jobs, but those jobs would effectively be subsidized by every citizen paying $$$ utilities. Putting a data center in the desert is such a terrible idea, I have to assume illegal kickbacks are being provided to those in charge of the decision.

Not to mention the common complaint had around most data centers of air, water and noise pollution. To add a potential risk to our precious water supply is just idiocy.
