The California Energy Commission (CEC) will host a remote-access workshop featuring various analyses related to potential energy bill impacts of residential decarbonization retrofit programs.

The public can participate in the remote-access workshop consistent with the attendance instructions below. The CEC aims to begin promptly at the start time posted and the end time is an estimate based on the proposed agenda. The workshop may end sooner or later than the posted end time.

Agenda

CEC staff will provide an overview of a model-based residential energy bill impact analysis supporting the Equitable Building Decarbonization (EBD) Program. There will be additional presentations on similar energy bill impact analysis from data analytics organizations.

A detailed schedule will be posted prior to the workshop in the Equitable Building Decarbonization Docket 22-DECARB-03, <http://efiling.energy.ca.gov/Lists/DocketLog.aspx?docketnumber=22-DECARB-03>.

Background

The State of California is committed to a just and equitable transition to carbon neutrality by 2045. Residential and commercial buildings account for about 25 percent of California's greenhouse gas emissions, so the decarbonization of buildings and engagement of all communities are essential to achieving the state's carbon neutrality goal. In September 2022, Governor Newsom signed Assembly Bill 209 (Committee on Budget, Chapter 251, Statutes of 2022), which directed the CEC to develop and implement the EBD Program. The primary goals of the EBD Program are to reduce greenhouse gas emissions from existing residential buildings and advance energy equity. The program also encourages resiliency to extreme heat, indoor air quality improvements, energy affordability, grid reliability, and local workforce opportunities. In addition, it advances the state's goals of six million heat pump installations by 2030 and provides opportunities for residents to automatically shift or reduce their energy usage in response to an automated price or other signal.

The CEC modeled potential residential energy bill impacts to support the EBD Program and other home decarbonization programs. This analysis aims to understand the potential energy and bill impacts of decarbonization retrofits in homes on discounted rates, including at the statewide level and at the individual home level. By understanding impacts, program implementers can focus outreach in areas that will yield benefits for residents and maximize progress toward statewide goals such as greenhouse gas reductions. By understanding impacts at the individual home level, program implementers can identify the decarbonization measure(s) that will lead to beneficial outcomes for each residence and effectively communicate potential bill impacts to home occupants and owners.
