The last good thing

I am 66 years old and was born and raised in Hayward Ca. We use to travel by car all over the country every summer growing up. The thing I noticed most was how you felt after showering and how the water tastes. In some areas you were advised not to drink water straight from the tap. There was often an odor coming from the tap as well. Many places it felt like a film or residue would be left on your skin after showering. It seems to me that there were very few places where the water was as refreshing, both to drink and shower in, as the water in my home town of Hayward Ca. In recent years water has basically been the last good thing in California that some level of government had not spoiled, taken away or taxed so ridiculously that you had to sell a kidney to afford it. Now you want to ruin that too. All of you greedy idiots need to consider the future past the end of your own self serving lives. I want my grandchildren to enjoy a happy healthy life here in Hayward just as I have. California was absolutely amazing when I was growing up. Unfortunately the extremely corrupt state government has destroyed or endangered so much of this beautiful state. Doing things like Taxing companies that did business here right out of the state and the misappropriation of federal disaster relief money making it impossible to recover and rebuild.or how about that high speed rail. More good money after bad with nothing at all to show for it. My point is politicians need to serve the people who elected them and not themselves. So whoever lined their pockets on the server campus BS needs o give the money back, tell the company to go somewhere else and leave our water alone. Someone somewhere better start thinking long term again and stop selling o
