Subject: Approval of National Lighting Contractors Association of America as Acceptance Test Technician Provider

Dear Mr. Commins,

I am requesting that the California Energy Commission (CEC) have additional Acceptance Test Technician Providers (ATTCP). As of today, CALCTP is the only approved provider of ATTCP courses. My company has had the experience of dealing with providers found through CALCTP, and we have encountered difficulty enrolling in an ATTCP course due to the fact that we are a non-union company. This is not acceptable.

There is another school that is ready and willing to provide the much needed ATTCP courses. I am writing this letter in support of approval of National Lighting Contractors Association of America's (NLCAA) application filed with the CEC. Jack Yapp of NLCAA has demonstrated that his program meets or exceeds the CEC's program guidelines for Acceptance Test Technician Providers. His school is well equipped with the latest advanced lighting control systems and he is extremely knowledgeable on the Title 24 regulations. His enthusiasm and willingness to teach are a valuable asset for contractors in the electrical field.

Please ensure that NLCAA has a fair chance at becoming an ATTCP. There are many non-union electrical contractors that are depending on it.

Best Regards,

John Robinson
