Hope

My name is Brian Hurst, and I am a local Union Ironworker with Ironworkers Local 433. My family and I live in this community, and our children attend school nearby. For me, a project like this is more than just another job—it is an opportunity to help build and improve the community that my family and I call home.

Projects like this also give local working families the opportunity to earn a living close to home. When we can work in our own communities, we are able to spend more time with our families instead of losing hours traveling long distances for work. That has a real impact on the quality of life for local families and keeps good jobs and wages within the community.

When you hire union labor, you are hiring experienced, highly trained professionals who take pride in the work they do. Safety is always at the forefront of our minds. Union workers continually train, attend classes, maintain certifications, and work together to improve our skills and job-site safety.

The ongoing education, training, and certification requirements of union trades help ensure that projects are completed safely, efficiently, and to a high professional standard. We understand that the structures we build will be used by our families, friends, neighbors, and future generations, and we take that responsibility seriously.

I strongly believe that using skilled union labor on projects in our community is an investment not only in quality construction, but also in local workers and local families. I would be proud to have the opportunity to help build something that makes the community where my family lives, learns, and grows a better place.

Sincerely,

Brian Hurst
