To whom it may concern:

As part of my business I prepare Title 24 energy calculations for residential projects. While I applaud the intent of the code to make buildings more energy efficient I think the way the code is being implemented is heavy handed, overly complicated, and generally very difficult to deal with. There must be a better way to achieve the goals we all want to obtain than the methods that are currently being required.

It shouldn't be necessary to be online and connected to the CEC computer to do the calcs, there has to be a better way than for so many of our projects to have to be registered, there is too much paperwork, the whole process is difficult, cumbersome and expensive. It also shouldn't be so easy to trigger a HERS verification requirement.

Please make the effort to take this onerous mule of code and make it so it's a more positive experience for those of us who have to and will continue to have to deal with the 2013 Title 24 Energy Regulations.

Sincerely yours,

R.E. Minor
