Remove entire power plant from our shoreline in Oxnard

The shoreline of California should have no power plants on it from now on. Oxnard has had this facility for 50 years on its beach, blocking the visual perfection of the coastline and expelling sea water that has been used in the cooling of the facility. Farming communities like Oxnard are not the dumping ground for Californians. It is the play ground for Californians and the key access point to the Channel Islands National Park. The coast line should no longer host industrial monstrosities such as the Puente Power Plant.
