The drought you can't see

Geophysical methods detect changes in water storage pp. 1543 & 1587

26 September 2014 Magazine Cover: Satellite image from NASA's Gravity Recovery and Climate Experiment (GRACE) mission showing California's devastating loss of fresh water (in red) since 2002. In each of the past 3 years, epic drought has drained the region of more than 15 cubic kilometers of fresh water. Borsa et al. report the crustal response to much of this water loss.
