Docket NO. 02-REN

Comments by Golden Sierra Power Inc. for Committee Workshop on the Proposed Changes to the Emerging Renewables Program Guidebook, 5th Edition and Performance Based Incentive Program Scheduled for Monday, December 5, 2005 at the California Energy Commission, Hearing Room A. at 9 A.M.

Golden Sierra Power Inc., (GSP) recommends that the rebate level remain at $2.80/watt.

Currently, an active Bill and a CPUC decision are under consideration and will not be acted on until after January 15, 2006. First is SB 1, which currently sits in the California State Assembly and is scheduled for some sort of action or non-action upon the Assembly's return to Session in 2006. A potential compromise is in the works.

Additionally, a CPUC Draft Decision by Judge Malcolm regarding Rulemaking 04-03-017 makes recommendations that the CEC and CPUC programs be combined by June of 2006. It also recommends the CPUC program adjust to $2.80/watt to match the CEC's level while providing funding for the 2006 CPUC SGIP program.

Lowering the incentive will not assist in achieving the goal of reducing prices to a level where incentives are no longer needed in the industry. Any current adjustments will only be passed on to the consumer and will not have the affect of driving the cost of solar equipment down. Due to the shortage of panels and inability of the manufacturing to react to the increased demand in a timely manner, the market has experienced at minimum, a 25% increase in price over the last 12 months. Over the last six months, the average cost for PV under 30 kW was $8.60/watt while providing a $2.80/watt rebate. The average cost for PV systems currently in the SGIP Program is $8.61/watt while receiving $3.50/watt. Because this technology is still considered a "disposable income" purchase for businesses or individuals, these purchasers are paying the additional increase to have the system purchased and installed now rather than wait for price reductions. At the conclusion of this upwardly cycle, the starting point for price reduction will be higher based on the CEC not allowing the two rebates to combine and pricing to level off.

Additionally, GSP would also encourage the Commission to adjust the required standards affordable housing projects must meet be 20% more energy efficient than the current standards specified in Title 24 of the California Code of Regulations or will take measures to reduce the unit's energy use by at least 20% as calculated pursuant to Title 24 compliance models. By increasing the requirement to 20%, these units will require less need for electrical power, thus creating less cost for the system. Again these systems at today's current market prices are "disposal income products" that are being subsidized by the state. This type of additional pricing will allow PV providers to increase the price to take advantage of a higher rebate level while providing little savings to the resident. This will also allow landlords to subsidize cost by being able to charge higher rent based on eliminating subsidized electrical cost. The Utilities provide low income programs that dramatically reduce the cost of power to those individuals who purchase electricity from the participating Utilities. By replacing these low income programs with the "affordable housing" incentive that has annual limited funding, the Utility has now shifted the financial burden of the subsidy to the Renewable Program. Owners and developers of "affordable housing" that receive the additional subsidy that is mandated by Assembly Bill 58 (Keeley, Statutes of 2002, Chapter 836), should be required to meet higher standards so less solar will be required. Price caps should also be considered.

The CEC should adjust the current PBI program rebate amount to $.60/watt. An analysis was developed to determine the amount of kWh required to achieve certain incentive levels while making adjustments for price and solar radiation availability. The current $.50/watt would require a system to produce over 1,860 kWh per 1 KWAC to equal the current incentive rate of $2.80/watt. By using NREL's Solar Radiation data models, there are few locations within the State of California that would meet the solar radiation requirements needed to obtain the production level that would equate to the $2.80/watt.

GSP has conducted an analysis of the current PBI rebate rate along with different price points and production values. This analysis will provide supporting data showing the amount of funds provided along with the cost to the Host customer based on production. Additionally, GSP analyzed the PBI Program being proposed and recommended by Americans for Solar Power. GSP started by taking the average cost of systems, $8.61/watt within the SGIP program, and calculated the Host gross and net cost, the cost of kWh over 25 years as well as the cost of subsidy to the Rate Payer. Then by implementing other price points as well as increasing the current PBI amount, the analysis provides data based on cost and the potential power produced. It should be noted that GSP chose to incorporate only the new Federal Tax Incentive. GSP did not include state tax incentives; financing fees; the cost of future monies; or depreciation of the equipment. GSP surveyed customers and found that these are either unusable or have variables that provide different values based on income levels. The only consistent value that could be assured of being applied was the Federal Tax Credit. By adding additional payout years, the additional finance changes increase the cost of the system that would offset any other tax incentives or rapid depreciation benefits. See Appendix 1 -11.

Modify the percentage amount that is subtracted from the CEC rebate amount in Section III, Part B, "Other Incentives May Affect Your Rebate Amount". Request the amount be changed from 50% to 5%. Why should the State benefit in savings when the effort to submit and obtain these grants weighs solely on the shoulders of the Host Customer or System Provider? Entities should be encouraged to utilize additional grant programs and not be penalized for receiving competitive regulated grants that are for assistance when certain criteria have been met. The amount of energy and effort it takes to achieve these grants is great and the State should not benefit through the hard work of others.

The CEC should rescind CEC 1038 R1, SECTION 4. "IF THE INVERTER RATED OUTPUT IS LESS THAN THE SYSTEM OUTPUT (KW), THE INVERTER RATED OUTPUT WILL BE USED TO CALCULATE THE REBATE." GSP recommends to the CEC that it rescind the rule that limits the PV provider from designing a system that allows for the manufacturer's recommended amount of STC power needed to run the inverter to full capacity. Although it is difficult to change the incentive program's incentive calculation formula, end-users and PV providers who size systems that allow inverters to be run at stated kW output or capacity should not be penalized by only receiving the incentive based on the stated rated output of the Inverter. GSP has built a 10 kW that operates a full capacity and is producing well over the estimated kWh a standard 10 kW produces. By eliminating this rule, Systems will be designed to maximize production based on the location and availability of solar radiation even while being built and paid based on the system's PTC rated output.

GSP has also discovered that the NREL modeling data being utilized in determining solar radiation is inaccurate on production capabilities. The California Irrigation Management Information System currently tracks solar radiation statewide. The CEC should determine if the solar radiation data that is currently being tracked can be used to assist in developing production standards around the state. If Systems were allowed to run at full capacity based on "real solar radiation calculations", the State's production performance would increase by 10% to 15% while not affecting the actual production cost of the increase in kWh.
