Dear San Diego City Councilmembers,

Thank you yesterday for your actions to deny the CoGentrix appeal. I now hope that the CEC understands that San Diegans do not want this project to move forward. The CEC should be certain NOT to override local decision-making. It undermines the democratic process and puts us in great danger.

CEC: Please do not override our decision to deny the Quail Brush Generation Project and do not let a power plant destroy, pollute and cause substantial harm to our communities. The power plant will release toxins and carcinogens that local residents will breathe. It will destroy one of San Diego's most beautiful assets that attracts tourism and revenue. Further, it will ruin property values nearby and increase wildfire risks. San Diego is already being critiqued for poor compliance with greenhouse gas emission level requirements. There are many more affordable renewal energy options. When are we going to stop being lazy and think outside the box? Let's show the country that California a leader in providing quality of life instead of setting a horrible reputation and record.

Respectfully,

Jana Zawadzki
