Support of the Quail Brush Generation Project

I am a concerned citizen who supports the Quail Brush Generation Project 11 - AFC - 03 in the East Elliott Planning Area.

The San Diego region has recently lost several significant sources of local electricity generation, including the San Onofre Nuclear Generation Station, and it is becoming clear that large scale wind and solar generation will not be able to meet San Diego's energy needs, as recent press reports of higher than expected death rates of birds and other wild life have underscored. The proposed state-of-the-art power generation facility will have a much lower environmental impact when compared to other generators in the area, and not building it will result in a real increase in social costs to residents of San Diego, especially those who can least afford to absorb the rising cost of electricity. Not building the power plant would be socially irresponsible.
