Redondo Beach is not the Place!

Dear Ms. Kelly:

You may be thinking that half of Redondo Beach actually wants a power plant because only half the City voted in favor of Measure A. Nothing could be further from the truth! People voted against Measure A because AES threatened to sue, and mounted a huge campaign saying they would bankrupt the City!

There is lots of land that is already being used for industrial purposes right up 190th street. This would allow our densely populated area to breathe clean air, while the noxious fumes from the power plant simply mix with the existing fumes from the refinery. Why pollute another area? Shouldn't we separate residential land use from industrial uses?

If the power is needed, which has not been shown to be true, why does it need to be generated on oceanfront property with schools, retirement communities, and residences nearby? The distance the power must travel up transmission lines is inefficient as well.

Please consider alternate locations for this power plant!
