I don't believe there is a need for this power plant to be rebuilt. It is not a high output plant. Also, it is so close to the ocean but can no longer use ocean water to cool it, so why not rebuild it (if the energy really is needed) in another location, away from high density living? It would give the city a chance to develop something nicer near the ocean and improve the view for everyone. I also think we should be looking at alternative sources of energy more than traditional power plants anyway. Thank you for reading this.
