No Power plant please

We in Redondo Beach are, in a sense, up against a wall in that there is a physical limit to how much can be built due to the ocean as a limiter. This means we are continually be asked to accept more and more density. The power plant as it is consuming too much of our open space, not only because of the plant itself, but because of all the border land and the power lines. Even a new powerplant with a smaller footprint will be using up a lot of land. This should stop if we have an opportunity. It is important to our children and their children that we preserve as much open space as possible.

Please give us back our open space.
