I Support Reach Codes

I am a member of Mothers Out Front, a growing organization of mothers and others across the country working for a livable climate for all children. For a sustainable future for us all. Strong reach codes for building electrification will be the next most crucial step toward that sustainable future. We have the technology to construct buildings that are 100% electric. It's proven to be cost-effective. We at Mothers Out Front want our cities to have the strongest incentives legally possible to encourage building electrification. We no longer need to build with fossil gas. Gas is dirty and dangerous. People in homes and highrises deserve clean indoor air, lower utility bills, and access to overnight EV parking. Our children and grandchildren deserve sustainable, clean buildings and a livable climate. Our cities could be the climate responsible examples for other cities and states to follow.
