AES is clear health and safety risk

How many industrial gas leaks in densely populated areas are acceptable?

Last night there was a loud hissing from the AES plant followed by the smell of natural gas.

This is the 2nd time in about a month.

This makes me and my family feel that our health and safety are being threatened. To add insult to this injury, we are being threatened by a plant providing very little public good (rarely used, grossly outdated and inefficient - and reportedly not essential to the grid - not to mention it is an unnecessary industrial blight on our otherwise beautiful coastline).

Please shut them down and keep them down..
