I want to keep propane as part of my home energy

I am concerned that eliminating propane as an option for home use is under consideration. My home is powered by solar electric panels with whole home power wall batteries but I still use propane for cooking and for water heating. Solar is not infallible. During the fire season, our solar panel production was greatly affected by the smoke-filled air. Although I have considered going all electric, I like the option to continue with propane.

Also, many people cannot afford to convert to solar energy and PGE costs are outrageous. Propane should remain a viable option for the California home owner.
