Disproportionate Affordability Impacts

Lofty discussions on environmental impacts and social change seem to be the focus that drives policy. But the the impacts of associated climate change funding costs applied to such things like modifications to existing housing, electricity supplies, transportation and travel, food production, clothing manufacturing, healthcare, water, garbage, and sewer services, communications, the internet, and entertainment, demonstrated by the increases that are already being felt and disproportionately impacting the disabled, unemployed, low- and fixed- income members of our communities, and is not being quantified and discussed by the Commission. I think this shows enormous shortsightedness. State law requires the fair treatment of people of all races, cultures, and incomes with respect to the development, adoption, implementation, and enforcement of environmental laws, regulations, and policies.
