Over all cost of changes

We are a small family business and I feel that some of these changes will benefit larger rating companies. Making it harder for the smaller businesses to compete with the "Walmart" rating companies.

We pride ourselves on providing staff and installer training with the best work practices to regularly comply with the energy code. If we switch to a business model where we are advertising to homeowners I think larger rating companies will gain an advantage over us smaller family run businesses. I also don't see how this change of requiring the homeowners to pay for our services is going to make a bad rater into a good one. I think if a bad rater is providing false results to pass a house now they will continue this habit no matter who is paying them.
