- 1) This is a feasible task but would be time-consuming as it requires coordination with our counterparties. This means we cannot guarantee timely compliance. The financial impacts of obtaining this information include, but are not limited to, increased employee time to work with the counterparties to get this information.
- 2) This is a feasible task, but settlement data can change from month to month depending on true ups. It is not uncommon for settlement data to be changed anywhere from three months to a year later. The financial impact of obtaining and reporting this hourly settlement data would not be significant but may result in inefficient use of employees' time to make corrections due to true ups.
