The California Energy Commission (CEC) will host a pre-rulemaking workshop to solicit feedback on proposed changes to the Power Source Disclosure (PSD) program regulations at California Code of Regulations, Title 20, Division 2, Chapter 3, Article 5 beginning with Section 1391, including changes required by Senate Bill (SB) 1158 (Becker, Chapter 367, Statutes of 2022) and Assembly Bill (AB) 242 (Holden, Chapter 228, Statutes of 2021).

The public can participate in the workshop consistent with the attendance instructions below. The CEC aims to begin promptly at the start time posted and the end time is an estimate based on the proposed agenda. The workshop may end sooner or later than the posted end time.

The Lead Commissioner from the CEC may be present at the workshop but will not take action on any matters.

Agenda

The workshop will include a presentation by CEC staff on the draft regulations, staff paper, and hourly reporting template. Discussion items for the workshop will include:

- SB 1158 hourly accounting implementation
- Proposed updates to annual accounting
- Proposed additions to the power content label
- Hourly reporting template
- Data Submission Portals and Snowflake databases for hourly and annual accounting
- Other changes proposed to regulatory language

There will also be an opportunity for public comment at the workshop.

Background

The PSD program was initially authorized by SB 1305 (Sher, Chapter 796, Statutes of 1997) and the CEC initially promulgated program regulations in 1998 at Cal. Code Regs. Tit. 20, § 1391 et seq. In 2019, the CEC adopted modifications to the regulations to implement AB 1110 (Ting, Chapter 656, Statutes of 2016), which included the requirement for a retail supplier to disclose the GHG emissions intensity for each electricity portfolio that it offers. On December 7, 2021, CEC staff held a workshop to initiate pre-rulemaking activities for AB 242, which established deadlines for retail suppliers to post and distribute their power content labels. The workshop also addressed clarifying changes to the regulations, such as the reporting requirements for new community choice aggregators and the retirement of unbundled renewable energy credits.

SB 1158 became law in 2022 and requires retail suppliers to begin reporting hourly loss-adjusted load and GHG emissions data to the CEC starting in 2028; the CEC is required to adopt rules on these requirements by July 2024. SB 1158 stipulates that the California Public Utilities Commission and the governing boards of publicly owned utilities may use hourly data to track progress toward GHG emissions reduction targets.

As a result of this new legislation, the PSD program will be responsible for the reporting of power sources and emissions at both the annual and hourly level. The PSD program has prepared draft regulations to implement SB 1158's hourly accounting methodology. The draft regulations also propose updates to the PSD program's annual accounting methodology to calculate the GHG emissions of a retail supplier's total load—including losses and end uses other than retail sales—and to display this data on the power content label provided to customers. Additionally, the PSD program has proposed a draft hourly template that reflects the calculations that will be used in hourly accounting. The accompanying staff paper explains the proposed hourly accounting methodology, annual accounting updates, and the CEC's plans to modernize its data collection and processing to support new hourly and annual reporting requirements.
