I Support Whole-House energy Rating

I have seen a version of energy rating that has been practiced in France for quite a few years now. All the real estate listings, at least for residential property, prominently display a letter grade (A, B, C, D, etc.) indicating generally how energy-efficient the structure is. Whenever I look at those listing in the windows of real estate offices I always pay close attention to them. I think that must be very helpful to people who actually want to make a purchase. I support measures such as this.
