ignoring residents and ignoring protocol

as most residents of the area I am concerned about displacing a patch of land with something I consider toxic. But what is really shocking to me is the fact that this company attempted to go through the legal process of obtaining rights to build their energy storage facility, yet one they were told that it most likely would not be successful they decided to shun protocol, ignore legal procedure, and disregard the micro infrastructure that holds this country together which is small towns and cities throughout the US. we cannot let this be a situation where we disregard this abuse simply because it is a small town in California that no one in the state government considers important. It must be seen as a precedent being set if we allowed the process of obtaining rightful permission through the proper channels. I would be incredibly upset with our state representative if this is allowed
