No New Power Plant in Redondo Beach

As a lifetime resident of the South Bay, I have great concerns about the new power plant proposed by AES, when it appears that it is not necessary for grid reliability, power plants no longer will be allowed to use ocean water for cooling, and a larger plant means a larger blight on the waterfront. We need other solutions, such as in Europe where power plants and other polluters are located outside the cities. The heavily populated coastal area needs a better solution than a new, polluting power plant in the midst of all these residents. And a better use of land for the public good.
