HECA PROJECT

A coal fired electrical generating plant near communities in the environmentally sensitive San Joaquin valley seems contradictory to efforts by other government agencies working for cleaner air in this valley. The even more confusing Federal policy of giving tax payer money to a private venture which apparently is not economically viable on its own just adds to the inconsistencies and further illustrates the marginal nature of the project. Why should the public make sacrifices to clean up our air when government officials indorse activities that subvert those efforts? The fundamental purpose of democracy is to protect the people from the power and greed of the few. That's why we have elections for those officials who forget that. Please do not approve this project.
