A chance to get it right

It's not everyday that we, as an individuals, or as a group of individuals get a chance to directly impact our community in such a profound manner. As a resident of Redondo Beach for the last 20+ years, I've truly enjoyed all of the beauty, and the sense of community this quant city has to offer. I am an entrepreneur that strongly believes in economic growth and the development of our own prosperity. But we have a unique opportunity to make a decision as a community that will help remind our children, and our children's children that improvement to a community doesn't always have to involve a cement trucks and hard hats. Simply, the power has served a purpose, and the purpose that it served now has options and alternatives...and those options can help the residents of Redondo Beach reclaim in some small way the vision of a quant beach town that puts the experience of the people that call it home, as well as the many people who want to visit the California dream, up close and personal above all other...above the interests and greed of a powerful lobby who see only the dollar, under the guise of growth. So we continue to be challenged with every resource available to those with special interests, and those powerful lobbyists. We're at the precipice of this important decision, and I hope we as a community take this chance to get it right.
