Strongly opposed to a new power plant

When the Redondo Beach power plant was originally conceived, there was a much smaller population, and the need for water cooling from the ocean was very important. Times have changed. We do cooling differently now, and Redondo Beach, Hermosa Beach, and surrounding communities are very densely populated now. It simply does not make sense to build a new power plant and subject the public to unnecessary air pollution. We don't have enough trees and plants to counteract the greenhouse gases that would be produced by a new power plant. This will be detrimental to our health.

I believe that the power plant is not needed, and that we have enough sources of power in California. The Redondo Beach power plant should be retired, and the current plant should be removed. We should find a sensible plan for addressing the financial interests of AES. However, such financial interests must should not outweigh the health interests of the public.
