Re: HECA Reference in PG&E Notice of Improper Ex Parte Communications in CPUC
Docket A. 13-02-012 (CEC Docket No. 08-AFC-8A)

Dear Mr. Heiser,

Please find attached PG&E's September 15, 2014 filing to the California Public Utilities Commission providing notice of improper ex parte communications. In the email thread, PG&E staffer Brian Cherry lobbies President Peevey's Chief of Staff Carol Brown for ALJ Wong to be assigned to PG&E's multi-billion-dollar gas transmission/storage proceeding.

We bring this to your attention because HECA was referenced in the improper email exchange, raising concerns about fair and transparent vetting of the HECA project throughout the regulatory processes. The email from PG&E states "I think Tom is going to have a harder time on HECA internally as a result of not getting [ALJ Wong on the PG&E's gas transmission/storage proceeding case]".

This document has been e-filed with the Commission and served on parties via the Commission's e-filing system. Please let me know if you have any questions. Thank you.

Sincerely,

Investigation 14-06-016

PACIFIC GAS AND ELECTRIC COMPANY'S NOTICE OF IMPROPER EX PARTE COMMUNICATIONS

Pacific Gas and Electric Company ("PG&E") hereby provides notification that PG&E has become aware of ex parte communications between PG&E and Commission personnel concerning this proceeding. PG&E believes that these communications violated the Commission's Rules of Practice and Procedure governing ex parte communications.

The written communications at issue are dated from January 9, 2014 to January 29, 2014. The subject matter of the communications is the assignment of this proceeding to particular Administrative Law Judges and Commissioners. Written ex parte communications on this subject matter of which PG&E is currently aware are included in Attachment A of this notice. PG&E believes that oral ex parte communications concerning the same topic occurred during this same time period.

PG&E cautions that its evaluation of the facts and circumstances surrounding these communications is ongoing. PG&E will provide notice in the event additional ex parte communications are identified.

The undersigned is counsel in this proceeding only for purposes of representing PG&E on issues related to these ex parte communications.

Respectfully Submitted,

MARTIN S. SCHENKER

I'm horrified! He still has not produced a PD for Sempra's PSEP/TCAP after much prodding and cajoling-- we are considering asking that another ALJ be assigned to finish for him. Plus he may retire any day, and uses that as a threat to deflect any direction. Sepideh spoke to John Wong and he said he's just too overloaded, which we didn't know. John is a true workhorse so it must be true. If I were you I would bump him-- you really can't do any worse! Even a brand new ALJ would at least work hard and try -- you'll get neither from him... Keep me posted and I'll do what I can on this end.....

Congress of the United States
Washington, DC 20515

January 17, 2014

Ms. Colette D. Honorable
Chairman of the Board and President
National Association of Regulatory Utility Commissioners
1101 Vermont Avenue, NW
Suite 200
Washington, DC 20005

Dear Ms. Honorable:

Recently we had the opportunity to hear from one of the nation's largest electric utilities about the profound changes occurring in the industry, including opportunities for improved reliability, increased affordability, and environmental benefits. We see the potential for technology-based solutions that will significantly benefit the economy and improve the delivery of energy for customers across the country. Success, however, depends on forward-thinking policies that ensure utilities are incented to make the right choices today, so that our nation is positioned competitively in the future. We believe it is imperative that this conversation be moved forward at both the federal and state levels, and are prepared to actively engage.

The electric industry is poised to invest two trillion dollars over the next decade to move our economy and energy infrastructure forward. Due to the capital-intensive nature of these investments, it is incumbent upon legislators, like us, and regulators, like those the National Association of Regulatory Utility Commissioners represents, to review the policies we have in place and make sure they are consistent with our long term goals.

We recognized this need several years ago when we supported many provisions in the American Reinvestment and Recovery Act (ARRA) that focused on supporting the advancement of next generation technologies and helping states and utilities to fund this transition. From supporting the deployment of smart meters, to training home weatherization professionals, to funding research in energy storage, energy management, and battery technologies, ARRA provided opportunities for utilities and state regulators to capitalize on new technologies and facilitate the transformation of our nation's energy infrastructure. While we have taken a number of steps over the past four years through ARRA and other important efforts, we recognize there is more we can do at the federal level to capitalize on these exciting opportunities.

At the same time, some of the very complex and more immediate policies impacting utility investment decisions must be addressed at the state level. In many states, barriers exist to fully realizing the potential of energy efficiency due to the current regulatory model in place. Additionally, distributed generation is an exciting technology that provides many benefits, ranging from helping to combat climate change to providing customers with more autonomy over their energy choices. However, this technology requires that important investments be made to optimize distributed resources, while also ensuring the reliability and resiliency of the grid for everyone.

Finally, we also recognize that we must begin to consider new uses for electricity and the implications of such uses. The opportunities for electrification are significant – and will provide real environmental, fiscal, and national security benefits. At the same time, we recognize that the more demand that is put on the electric grid, the greater the need to ensure that our infrastructure is robust enough to handle the increased and sometimes unpredictable energy use.

These are truly exciting times for the electric industry and our nation. We look forward to hearing how NARUC and its membership are viewing these issues, and the policies being considered to ensure that we are positioned to capitalize and facilitate these opportunities in a way that also ensures the safety, reliability and affordability of the system for everyone. To that end, we would appreciate receiving from you a list of policies that state regulators are pursuing along with recommendations as to what Congress and the federal government can do to compliment these state efforts and update our energy policies for the 21st century.
