BACKGROUND

On December 30, 2015, Applicant Mission Rock Energy Center, LLC (owned by Calpine Company) submitted an Application for Certification to construct, own and operate an electrical generating facility in Ventura County, California, approximately 2 miles west of Santa Paula, near Highway 126. The facility would be a natural gas-fired, simple-cycle power plant comprising five combustion turbine generators (CTGs), with a combined nominal generating capacity of 255 megawatts (MW). Additionally, Mission Rock would house twenty (20) on-site ion battery units for the storage of electricity, providing an additional 100 MWhours (25 MW for up to 4 hours) of nominal capacity. The CTGs would also be fitted with clutch systems enabling synchronized condenser operation to provide voltage (Volt-Ampere Reactive or "VAR") support to the local grid without contemporaneous operation of the combustion turbines.
