Shut Down Aliso Canyon Gas Storage Facility

It is time to shut down Aliso Canyon and put safety first. We don't need the gas from that facility and we don't need the facility itself, what we really need is a rapid transition to clean, renewable energy.

The people of Porter Ranch have gone through a lot. No one should be subjected to the environmental hazards they have endured, or have to move away from their homes so that a corporation can take its time to figure out a way to control a disaster.

Moreover, we need to ensure corporations don't damage our environment. Southern California Gas methane leak was a huge catastrophe that can only be compared to the BP Oil spill. This corporation not only withheld information about the leak, but fought orders to help those who were harmed by their neglect. SoCal Gas only cares about profits and stakeholders, not safety or being responsible.

The California Energy Commission must act to ensure Californians come first, and the only way to do so is to shut Aliso Canyon down forever and support clean, renewable energy that won't harm people or the environment.
