Increasing building electrification and decarbonization

Californians have made it clear time and time again that we want to move toward 100% renewable energy and zero-emission buildings. This does not mean moving to methane, but instead prioritizing building decarbonization and jumpstarting electrification.

The recent UN report has made it clear that only aggressive actions will have a chance at mitigating the effects of Climate Change, and Californians have overwhelmingly decided to place themselves at the vanguard of this fight.

Thank you,
Dave Cowen
