Background

Public Resources Code Section 25301 requires the Energy Commission to prepare an IEPR every two years that includes assessments and forecasts of all aspects of energy industry supply, production, transportation, delivery and distribution, demand, and price. The Energy Commission uses these assessments and forecasts to develop energy policies that conserve resources, protect the environment, ensure energy reliability, enhance the state's economy, and protect public health and safety. The Energy Commission prepares updates to these assessments and associated policy recommendations in alternate years.

Senate Bill 1389 (Bowen and Sher, Chapter 568, Statutes of 2002) directs state government entities to use the information and analyses contained in the adopted IEPR to carry out energy-related duties and responsibilities. During this IEPR proceeding, the Energy Commission has coordinated closely with other agencies to ensure consistency in the underlying information used to develop this report.

As detailed in the scoping order, issued on March 20, 2018, by the IEPR lead commissioner, the 2018 IEPR Update is composed of two volumes. The first volume, adopted August 1, 2018, is a high-level summary of the innovative energy policies implemented in recent years, highlighting the role these policies have played in establishing California's leadership in building a clean energy future.

The 2018 IEPR Update, Volume II provides a more detailed follow-up of several energy issues examined in the 2017 IEPR and encompasses new analytical work. The Energy Commission held 16 public workshops between April 2018 and January 2019 on a variety of topics in the scoping order including:

- Advancing greenhouse gas reductions in California's buildings.
- Continuing work on the framework developed in response to Senate Bill 350 (de León, Chapter 547, Statutes of 2015) to double energy efficiency savings by 2030.
- Enhancing the resiliency of the electricity system while integrating increasing amounts of renewable energy.
- Working to ensure that low-income and disadvantaged communities have an opportunity to participate in and benefit from advancements in energy efficiency, renewable energy, and clean transportation.
- Advancing climate change activities with the goal of making consideration of climate change a routine part of planning.
- Ensuring energy reliability in Southern California.
- Developing an update of California's energy demand forecast that was adopted in the 2017 IEPR.

All workshop documents, including agendas, background material, transcripts, presentations, and public comments, are available at:
