Earlier this month the Energy Futures Initiative released a report on deep decarbonization of California's energy economy. Below is a website link to a copy of the full study and executive summary, and attached are a Fact Sheet and a "Findings" excerpt.

Former Energy Secretary Ernest Moniz, who headed up the report, previewed the study and its findings at an "invitation-only" event at Stanford University, which included academic, public interest and governmental representatives. I wanted to be sure you also were included in the distribution of this important report. See EFI's direct link to report here:
