Why

I guess it's here we go again, wondering how the state can come in and override local government. At the recent meeting in Anderson, if you noticed, everyone that had a positive comment if, or will receive money from the project. That include workers unions, consultants, old retired Cal Fire employees, which I'm sure are consultants, everyone else is against the project. Why is that? I personally have a cabin in Moose Camp and we don't want the eye sore, nor the problems that will come with the project. Imagine being just a mile away from these things that are huge. None of the power generated from this project will be used in Shasta County, kind of like most of the hydro electric that is generated here in the County.

I wish you would take the time and realize that we don't want the project, we as n the whole County. The Pit River Tribe is the ones that will be hurt the most, for me it's dust the destruction of creeks, and I would guess a lot of dust! It's not wanted, and it's not needed. Put the project somewhere like maybe the mountain tops above Lake Tahoe, let's see how that goes...
