The California Energy Commission (CEC) will host a workshop to present components of the 2023 California Energy Demand Forecast results for the 2023 Integrated Energy Policy Report (2023 IEPR). The workshop will cover the hourly and peak electricity demand forecast. The CEC originally planned to discuss the hourly and peak results at the December 6, 2023, IEPR workshop but instead will discuss these results on December 19, 2023.

The public can participate in the workshop consistent with the attendance instructions below. The CEC aims to begin promptly at the start time posted and the end time is an estimate based on the proposed agenda. The workshop may end sooner or later than the posted end time.

A quorum of CEC Commissioners including the Lead Commissioner for the 2023 IEPR may attend the workshop, but no votes will be taken.

Agenda

At this workshop, CEC staff will present the results of the hourly and peak electricity demand forecast components of the 2023 California Energy Demand Forecast. Staff will present peak electricity demand results through 2040 for the Planning Forecast and Local Reliability Scenario. The 1-in-X year peak electricity demand results will be discussed. There will also be a period for public comment.

Background

The CEC develops and adopts forecasts of electricity and gas demand every two years as part of the IEPR process. The electricity demand forecasts are used in various proceedings including the California Public Utilities Commission's integrated resource planning, distribution resource planning, <https://zoom.us/account/report?isPersonal=true> and resource adequacy proceedings, as well as the California Independent System Operator's transmission planning.

Staff presented the transportation energy demand forecast, distributed generation forecast, and the additional achievable energy efficiency and fuel substitution components of the forecast at the November 15, 2023, workshop.

On December 6, 2023, staff presented the results of the annual electricity and gas demand forecasts components of the 2023 California Energy Demand Forecast.
