This is one family totally against the proposal to require radio controlled thermostats, or any device that controls home appliances, pool pumps or any other device remotely. Indeed, this proposal does demonstrate one undeniable fact: California's regulators and legislators have become quite mentally ill in pursuit of so-called environmentalism. Truth is that the entire field of global warming, greenhouse gas and carbon emissions is a fraud based solely on junk science and a socio-political hysteria designed to establish centralized control of the individual through an authoritarian socialist regime. Of course, it also is designed to establish carbon offsets as a trading commodity, enriching certain interests.

Having power companies controlling our basic needs, through government mandated intrusion into our homes is not consistent with a free society. Especially when this is promulgated in lieu of building the additional power sources the market demands, all to satisfy some ridiculous mythology of a pending environmental catastrophe. Good god, doesn't anyone in Sacramento see how far the illness has spread?

After having listened to this insanity, and watched as the state has continued to deteriorate due to mismanagement and the headlong flight into madness, we have finally decided that California is no longer governable or desirable as a place to reside. This proposal is the final straw, we are moving from California as soon as possible, but certainly within 2008. Don't forget to turn the lights out.
