I'm just appalled, I really am. I can't believe you would even consider infringing upon the private property rights of people such as this. Its like you're blaming the fact that California power companies are incompetent on the citizens. "Gee, let's not fix the failing infrastructure, its fine. Instead, let's make sure those pesky consumers aren't using more than their share!"

It will have one positive side effect, though. I, along with many, will be glad to move out of California and to a better, less government intrusive state. The energy savings should be phenomenal.

In the future, please try NOT to be communists controlling supply and demand?
