

From: "Gray Bailey" <jgbailey1@mchsi.com>
To: <Docket@energy.state.ca.us>
CC: <me@glennbeck.com>, <oreilly@foxnews.com>
Date: 111112008 9:41 PM
Subject: Docket No. 07-BTSD-1

To Whom It May Concern:

I am constanly amazed at the lack of logic and forethought exhibited by the California Environmental elitist. If they REALLY wanted to help the state of California and reduce power plant emissions they would allow the building of new, fuel efficient power plants and close the inefficient dirty producers of power. The silliness of the proposal to regulate thermostats is that its authors would choose to impose their own warped ideas of utopia where the few have control over the many, instead of a logical, efficient and fundamentally healthy chance to eliminate dirty power producer by replacing them with vastly improved models. Sure, some may not think that this is a optimal solution, but it would provide cheaper power and allow the masses to remain unregulated and free Americans.

On the other hand, you could allow the thermostat regulation to proceed forward forcing more of your fine citizens to leave California's godforsaken desert of logic and contribute to the improvement of the rest of the country... I left and am thrilled to be somewhere else, even if it is Iowa.....

Sincerely,
John G. Bailey
formerly of Alameda, now happily of Bettendorf Iowa.