Subject: Controlling Thermostats? I say No!

I am deeply concerned about this new piece of legislation, and the provisions which give Insurance Companies the leeway to mandate requiring FM transmitters be placed in every and all new thermostats which gives the company the ability to monitor people's thermostats remotely, and also gives them control over the temperature of your thermostat in an "emergency situation". I think that neither insurance companies, nor the the government should have the right to control and monitor people's thermostats. I do not believe such powers are granted in the constitution. Please work against this continued downward slide into a surveillance police state. Protect the American people's liberties through legislative action which restrains government power whenever possible so that the threat of tyranny will be challenged and hopefully overcome in order to maintain our status as a free society. I hope you will consider my words.

Sincerely,
Max Bevis
