While most of the world is crying out for energy companies to find and implement cheap, sustainable, and non-polluting energy this appears to be an attempt to take away that burden and place it on the backs of the people buying that energy. That this would even be considered and that you expect the ratepayers to actually pay for this is absolutely ridiculous. Do these people all have short-term memory loss? Just a few short years ago energy companies committed crimes and gouged Californians by not only staging but actually creating false "energy emergencies." In my opinion, anybody who thinks this is a good and viable idea should be immediately removed from the commission.
