Attention G. Gekas:

It is not proper or constitutional for the State of California to plan to treat its citizens as though they are animals. It is your job as an employee of the state to do your best to provide electrical power for the citizens and the businesses of the state. It is your job to plan and produce enough power to comply with the needs of the States citizen workers the businesses and the economy to be able be successful enough to employ these citizens and for both groups successful enough to pay taxes to support the government

It is not your right or responsibility to interfere with the citizens lives in the manner of a dictator in a socialist nation. The Soviet Union tried that system of government and it lasted 70 years as a disaster. Their government used what you are proposing, it is called state planning. They couldn't even provide the food and necessities for their citizens, but their leaders lived high on the hog.

You are using the power of government to control the citizens instead of using that power to provide for the owners of the state, that is its citizens. It is stupid to try to shove socialism and social programs instead of planning for more electric power for the state. It is not your right to decide whether it is green power or purple power, get to the job of producing additional electric power plants now. The state is growing every year, and that growth makes it absolutely necessary to build power plants to cover the states needs. Quit financing windmills and sun panels. They are much too expensive.

Your efforts to force socialist programs on the state's citizens instead of providing the electrical power for the needs of the citizens is not acceptable.

Sincerely

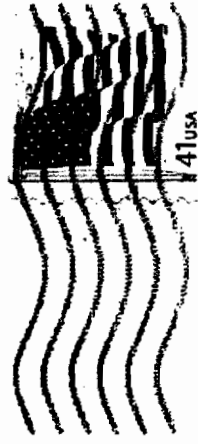

Dyle G. Anderson

P.S.
China's present electric energy plans include 30 Nuclear plants. Ultimately they plan for 300 more. sga
