Jackalyne Pfannenstiel

Dear Jackalyne Pfannenstiel:

Stop the insanity! Government intrusion into our own homes, is unacceptable. There is no way the government could possibly know the situation in each citizens home to be able to make such a decision for us. It is already bad enough that the government is trying to tell us what we can feed our children. The next step will be all government housing and cafeterias, where we are mandated to live and eat (of course politicians will be excepted). Have all of our politicians so lost contact with reality and the beliefs of the people that they cannot see the innate problem with all of this? Have they forgotten that we are a democracy and capitalists and not socialists and communists? This reminds me of the story of "The Emperors New Clothes" (It's a children's story, you all should read it). Our politicians are so insecure that, in fear of appearing stupid, they trudge along behind what they perceive to be, the currently, most popular idea. Government intrusion into our lives is not popular with Americans. We shouldn't even have to tell you this. The title Americans should tell you it already.

Don't forget what Ronald Reagan said (I paraphrase) The scariest words in the English language are, "I'm from the Government and I've come to help". My God! What is wrong with all of our politicians? It seems to me you are all very broken. If you can't repair yourselves, soon, We The People are going to revolt and send you all packing.

Stop the expansion of the government nanny state. Oppose the government controlled thermostats in our own homes.

Sincerely,

Dorothy Bleything
