Jackalyne Pfannenstiel

Dear Jackalyne Pfannenstiel:

What are you thinking??? Do you think Californians are contributing more than others to Global warming or something??? If so, this is incorrect. First of all, many people, especially the media both in the United States and other countries "point to" and blame the United States, and many times the West Coast States (California in particular), for using soooo much more fossil fuels than anyone else. Thus we "contribute to Global warming more than anyone else". This is not true and I think all of you know it!! Many other countries contribute much more to Global Warming than the either the U.S. or California. Take the Nickle Mines in Canada or Mines in China which are burning and poluting the air. Do you hear about these and other things in the media? You do not!! Our old computer equipment and truck engines, that have been or are being "changed" to make cleaner air, are being sent, bought, and used in other countries. Second I believe that the majority of the "Global Warming" is just following Earth's normal weather changes. Check out Earth's weather history over the thousands of years. It goes through "cold spells" followed by "hot spells" and back again. Some changes are colder or warmer than other spells. The "Global Warming Disaster" that the media and that many legislature refer to is suppose to be about 10,000 years off. Maybe by that time people will have thought of other ways to take care of the problem, if Earth is still here.

Government needs to stop intruding into our our lives and homes for things such as requiring homeowners to install a thermostat that can be adjusted by government bureaucrats. STOP trying to micro manage California citizens, whether it is where we set our thermostats (if we set it too high or use it too much, we pay exorbitate prices for it anyway, especially in the Southern End of California) to whether we have guns in our homes.

Californians already rank dead last among the 50 states in our per capita consumption of electricity. The average Californian uses about half the electricity as the average American, and less than consumers in Luxembourg, Guam, the Cayman Islands and Aruba.

Stop the expansion of the government nanny state. I oppose the government controlled thermostats in our own homes.

Sincerely,

Dayna Middleton
