

Gina D. Grey, Western States Petroleum Association

Gina Grey is currently serving as Western States Petroleum Association's Vice President of Strategic Policy, Fuels, Southwest, and Hawaii Regions. Her 24 years with Western States Petroleum Association has been focused upon refining, fuels, and the marketing side of the petroleum industry in the Western United States.

Ms. Grey provides policy advice on a wide range of association issues. She has managed a significant number of complex and strategic issues for all six of the association's member states, and has worked on several key fuels issues, such as gasoline and diesel reformulations and standards, low carbon fuel standards, energy supplies, alternative fuels, and state implementation plans. In addition, she has directed the association's legislative and regulatory advocacy efforts in Arizona, Nevada, and Hawaii.

After immigrating to the United States from Canada, she worked for the South Coast Air Quality Management District in the Public Affairs office. Prior to that, Gina worked for ten years with Ontario Hydro in Canada, overseeing environmental assessments for new fossil, nuclear, and hydroelectric generating stations.

She graduated with a degree in Environmental Science from the University of Toronto, Canada in 1977.
