Background

The Energy Commission provides full forecasts for electricity and natural gas demand every two years (in odd-numbered years) as part of the IEPR process. The forecasts are used in various proceedings, including the CPUC's Long-term Procurement Planning (LTPP) process and the California Independent System Operator's (California ISO) Transmission Planning Process (TPP). In its current form, the IEPR forecast consists of two parts: a baseline forecast, which includes energy efficiency savings from initiatives already in place or approved; and a forecast for savings from future energy efficiency initiatives, referred to as additional achievable energy efficiency (AAEE) savings. Combinations of the two parts yield a “managed” forecast for resource planning purposes.

The Energy Commission, CPUC, and California ISO committed to a collaborative work planning effort for the IEPR demand forecast, the LTPP, the TPP, and the CPUC energy efficiency proceedings. As part of this effort, the Energy Commission agreed to provide demand forecast updates in IEPR off years (even-numbered years) to provide timely, updated demand projections for resource and efficiency planning. The updated forecast involves incorporating more recent economic and demographic projections as well as employing the most recent historical data on electricity consumption and sales, peak demand, and distributed generation. For the 2016 IEPR Update, the Energy Commission will only update the baseline portion of the 2015 IEPR; AAEE savings for the managed forecasts will remain the same.

Following this workshop, the Lead Commissioner will consider stakeholder input and provide direction to Energy Commission staff concerning any revisions to either the baseline or managed forecast scenarios. Final versions of both the baseline and managed forecast scenarios will be considered for Commission adoption at a business meeting in February 2017.

Agenda

At the December 8, 2016, workshop, Energy Commission staff will present the statewide forecast update results, including updated economic/demographic data, the outcome of peak demand that represents “normal” weather for benchmarking purposes, and peak hour load shift results. For all the topics presented at this workshop, load-serving entities and other agencies are invited to provide comments or make presentations.
