Background

The 2017 IEPR scoping order identifies the topics to be addressed in the 2017 IEPR. The scoping order states, "The 2017 IEPR will continue work in the 2015 and 2016 IEPRs to implement Governor Brown's call to expand state adaptation activities through Executive Order B-30-15, with the goal of making the consideration of climate change a routine part of planning. To increase the resiliency of California's electricity and natural gas systems, in the 2017 IEPR the Energy Commission will continue to explore, in collaboration with CPUC and other energy entities, best practices for incorporating climate change and adaptation into the investor-owned utilities' (IOUs) and publicly owned utilities' (POUs) planning processes. This will include an examination of how Energy Commission supported research findings on climate adaptation can be better transferred to IOUs, POUs, and local agencies. In the 2016 IEPR Update, the Energy Commission worked with the CPUC to develop climate scenarios for use in energy planning. In the 2017 IEPR, the Energy Commission will build on this work and collaborate with the CPUC and other energy entities to operationalize the climate scenarios into energy planning. For example, the 2017 IEPR will identify climate parameters such as temperature extremes at specific locations and timeframes that can be drawn from the climate scenarios for energy planning purposes.”

Agenda

The workshop will include presentations and discussions on tools available for the identification of climate impacts to the energy sector, how certain climate parameters (such as 1 in 10 and 1 in 20 extreme temperature events) would change in the next few decades and the implications of these changes for IOUs and POUs, and lessons learned by the participation of IOUs in climate adaptation research activities supported by the Energy Commission. Presentations and discussions on practical ways to identify attractive adaptation options considering deep uncertainty associated with climate change will also be part of the agenda.
